The latest population forecasts for the UK expect our population to reach 70 million in 16 years compared with just over 62 million now.
How concerned, if at all, are you by this increase in population size?

According to official figures, just over two thirds of that estimated increase is likely to be as a result of immigration. Some argue that this will put great strain on resources in the UK, while others argue that the economic benefits justify this level of immigration.
To stop the population rising to 70 million, net immigration needs to be cut from around 240,000 last year to around 40,000 in future years.

In your opinion, which of the following is the right level of NET immigration for Britain (i.e. the number of people who enter minus the number of people who leave)?
