For the following question by the term 'London's airport capacity' we mean the the amount of air traffic that ALL of London's airports can accommodate.

There is currently debate surrounding whether to expand London's airport capacity. Some argue it is necessary for the capital's economic growth whilst others argue against expanding capacity because they say it would add to noise and air pollution.

When thinking about any changes to London's airport capacity, which ONE of the following proposals, if any, is closest to your view on this issue?
