The government announced it would make the current levy on the profits of banks permanent. This is expected to raise around £2.5 billion a year. In his speech, Mr Osborne said he wanted to strike a balance between making banks pay for their role in the crisis, but not to drive them overseas. Do you think...

- This goes too far, and risks driving banks overseas
- This does not go far enough, and banks should be made to pay more
- The balance is about right
- Don't know

The Court of Appeal ruled this week that 'decisive weight' should be given to a prenuptial agreement (an agreement signed before marriage) about how a couple's assets should be divided in the event of a divorce.

Generally speaking, do you think couples should sign such agreements before marriage?

- Couples should sign such agreements
- Should not
