It has been suggested that Britain should introduce a "national citizen service" plan. This would be a modern, non-military version of national service, with all young people spending 2 months working on social action projects, such as looking after the elderly. In principle, do you think this is a good or bad idea?

If a "national citizen service" plan were to be introduced for young people, do you think it should be a voluntary plan for only those who wish to take part, or compulsory for all young people to take part?
